

Integrated Renewal Program Community Connect

Volume One | April 2019

People are the cornerstone of UBC. As we embark on the next century as a leading public university, we know that the systems that have connected our people and places over the past 20+ years need to be modernized so we can continue to facilitate collaboration, agility and innovation.

Our systems need to be as integrated and flexible as our faculty, staff, students and partners so they can continue to create positive change. The Integrated Renewal Program is the catalyst to help us achieve our strategic objectives and I'm happy to be on this journey with all of you.

The Countdown is On - One Year to Go!

This month marks the one-year countdown to the implementation of new HR and Finance processes supported by a new integrated system. You have likely heard the terms Integrated Renewal Program and Workday, but may be unsure of what this means for you and UBC.

In our inaugural issue of Integrated Renewal Program Community Connect, we explore what the Integrated Renewal Program means for faculty, staff and students, why Workday was chosen, and where it will take the UBC community in April 2020 and beyond. Read more

IRP Engagement with the UBC Community

IRP is a significant undertaking and key to our success is engagement with the university community. It will affect how we do work in support of teaching, learning, and research. See what we have we done, what we plan to do to ensure we're making the best decisions for the UBC community, and when you can expect to find out more. Read more

People and Change: Dan Mathers

In this issue, meet Dan Mathers and learn how UBC is simplifying and realigning processes through Procurement Modernization to improve how we work across UBC as we get ready to implement Workday in April 2020.
